Shaking and freezing in the Himalayas

This happened a few months back. I was with a crew from a TV channel who had come to shoot a travel show in Northeast India.

They were traveling in the high Himalayas to capture some of amazing landscapes and culture. This is where I come in, as I was their tour operator and responsible for the smooth functioning of their travel. In return, they had promised me a little feature in the show for my ecotourism company.

We were at 15,000 feet above sea level when this funny and embarrassing episode occurred. The temperatures were well below zero and this is where they decided they wanted to shoot the interview with me. They setup the cameras and started recording the conversation I was having with the host of the show. But I didn't realize that I was literally shaking throughout the recording because of the extreme cold. They even made me have some rum which did not help. It was really embarrassing for me that I was not able to keep myself still, but nevertheless, we all had a good laugh over it. By the end, they decided to go through the interview regardless of whether I was shaking or not.

This month, they eventually aired the show on television, and guess what, they did not show most of the interview. I don't blame them though. I am sure its a good thing that viewers did not see me shaking.

Why is the website called bytestories.com?

This is a place for "byte-sized" stories and there is a 1500 character (about 250 words) limit for two main reasons. Firstly, we want you to know that "War and Peace" isn't required to leave your mark. Secondly, it takes about 2 minutes to read each story meaning you can head here whenever you want a quick (and entertaining) read.

If you would like to share a story or create your own eBook, simply head to bytestories.com, Register an account and click on the "Share a Story" button.
